

Among the Blue Mountains

by Ruth Dickson

New autobiographical tale of 1950s life in a logging camp

from Comox author & artist
Ruth Dickson

With Among the Blue Mountains Ruth Dickson completes the poignant tale she began in Pebbles in the Stream - River Rocks.

She, with her husband and three children, now live in Camp 3, a large railway logging camp near the head of Cowichan Lake. Although a less remote location than before, it has its own unique challenges.

During a labour strike, Ruth and her husband decide to take the family on a camping trip around the BC interior. This was a time when highways, bridges and parks were under construction and big changes were underway in the old “frontier” towns and “simple” way of life.

Illustrated with Ruth’s drawings and photographs, the book is alive with wonderful vignettes and heartfelt love, imparted in a clear, modest style. It’s a delight to read, cover to cover.
